Euralarm announces Symposium 2018

Zug, Switzerland, August 2017 - Euralarm has announced its next Symposium, whih will take place in Bucharest Romania, on June 4th, 2018.

This will be the second time that Romania will host this event, showing the country's commitment to European electronic fire safety and security.

Euralarm Romanian Member ARTS, the Romanian Association for Security Technique presided by Liviu Mateescu, will the host of the event. "Romania is a market in expansion and I hope that you will be interested in discovering more about our country. For next year's Symposium, we are aiming to achieve the largest audience this event has known so far," said Mr. Mateescu.

The Euralarm Symposium has become a 'must' over the past years for professionals in the Fire Safety and Security Industry. Every year the Euralarm Symposium is the occasion for a gathering of all stakeholders in the fire or security markets, including installers, system integrators, manufacturers, end users, facility managers and certification bodies.

The topics of the Euralarm Symposium 2018 will be announced later this year. Last year, the Symposium focused on the future of fire and security services across Europe and turning the digital service market into business opportunities.
